A QUESTION ABOUT SELF-PUBLISHING AT SFSIGNAL

I'm just starting to make sales with my short stories, and I'm looking for an agent for an SF novel, hoping to go the traditional publishing route, but I've also written a 100k word YA fantasy with my 10-year-old daughter, and for several hundred dollars we can make sure it shows up at Amazon and Barnes & Noble. I think that's really cool. We're probably going to go with PageFree or Llumina Press, not Lulu, though. (Some helpful print-on-demand comparisons at <http://www.booksandtales.com/pod/>).

Or you can go to lightning source and for 95$ get it printed and listed everywhere on line automatically.
One problem, need an ISBN.

The other two places you mention charge a lot for the books, around 21.95 or more, remeber your book is 100K, that's a lot of pages.

I've heard some bad things about Llumina Press and many good things about pagefree.

Hope the sales go well for you.

whoops, me again. Llumina Press = my mistake. Thought they were someone else.

Instabook is great, I used them for blood of the wolf. Did well there.
